

SPLIN “Fair working conditions: exploring the contribution of cooperation initiatives between Social Partners and Labour Inspection authorities”

Online Final Conference

Thursday February, 11, 2021, 10:00-16:00 CET

Safeguarding labour standards through co-enforcement

SPLIN investigated the role of social partner organisations in inspecting and enforcing labour standards, often in cooperation with labour inspectorates or other enforcement institutions. Two industries were in the focus of research: construction where innovative examples of co-enforcement in Austria, Poland and Spain/Asturias were found, as well as maritime shipping where the activities of the ITF inspectorate network and its cooperation with national authorities (port state control and labour inspectorates) and unions in Spain, Finland and Poland were scrutinised.

In both sectors promising outcomes in terms of improving health and safety compliance and regulations, targeted and efficient inspections of bogus self-employment and underpayment, and in terms of better informing employers and workers about rights, standards, and obligations concerning OHS, wages, and other working conditions could be achieved. Efficient cooperation between social partners and inspectorates was a key success factor. In this sense, the actions can serve as good and exemplary practices to counteract and reduce fraudulent practices.

The final conference assembles all project partners and participants, including representatives of social partner institutions, labour inspectors and researchers to discuss project outcomes and conclusions for policies aiming at sustainably and effectively enforce labour standards in sectors prone to problematic working conditions. In dialogue with key stakeholders from academics, EU-level, and ILO, the final conference shall give the floor to share, disseminate and critically assess SPLIN findings.

The conference will be held online and provide simultaneous interpretation into German, Polish, English, Spanish.
